NARROW ESCAPE

Charles McCarthy Almost Suffocated in the Big Sewer

So far there has been no serious mishap in the construction of the East End sewer, but Thursday evening the good record so far maintained came dangerously near being broken.

Years ago the ground in the rear of James H. Hall & Company's Plow Works was a marsh covered with water, and notwithstanding the morass had long since been filled up the underneath ground is soft and bog earth.

Considerable annoyance and trouble has been encountered by the men digging the trench in this vicinity by cave-ins and several have had narrow escapes.

Thursday afternoon Charles McCarthy had an experience that will not soon be forgotten. His business is to cement the joints after the tiling is lowered and placed in position. In order to do this work he is compelled to imprison himself inside the tiling.

While thus engaged on the afternoon above mentioned the trench caved in on both sides for a distance of about twenty feet and buried him under ten feet of earth.

There was no egress, as a piece of ground in the rear had not been excavated on account of a switch running into the Plowshop yards and the tiling at that end was jammed against solid earth.

For a time there was excitement and consternation in the ranks of the men above as well as the entombed man at the bottom of the trench.

Recovering their breath, as well as their senses, after the first shock had passed, the men set to work with a will to rescue their fellow-workman from death by suffocation, which they did after shoveling tons of dirt out of the trench.

McCarthy now has some idea how it feels to be buried alive and succumb to death by slow degrees.

This is one time that Charley said his prayers with unctious and fervor.

A Certain Cure for Croup.

When a child shows symptoms of croup there is no time to experiment with new remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended. There is one preparation that can always be depended upon. It has been in use for many years and has never been known to fail, viz. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Mr. M. P. Compton of Market, Tex., says of it: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in several cases of croup with my children, and can truthfully say it always gives prompt relief." For sale by all Drugists.

CALEB FLANAGAN.

At West Union Wednesday of this week occurred the death of Caleb Flanagan, who was stricken with paralysis a day or so previous.

Deceased was born March 25th, 1822, at Clarksburg, W. Va.

In 1846 he moved from that place to Maysville, where he and his brother-in-law, W. H. McGranaghan, afterwards for many years a prominent physician of this city, conducted the tailoring business.

After a short stay here he removed to Manchester, and there he lived until the year 1884, when, his wife having died, he went to West Union, where he engaged in business.

Mrs. Louis Holze has been housed several weeks with a severe cold.

H. B. Butcher of Plummer's Landing has bought an eighty-acre farm in this county and will move here the first of next March.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from one drop to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. COURT'S DECISION.

GREAT LEGAL OPINION

Expression of Judge Barker, Democrat, in Powers Case

Utterance of Unusual Interest and Significance

Louisville Herald.

The very vigorous and striking separate opinion of Judge Henry S. Barker of the Court of Appeals, handed down in the case of Caleb Powers, is an expression of individual judicial opinion that will attract wide attention. It was concurred in by Judge O'Rear, but the expression of it is Judge Barker's, and under the circumstances it possesses deep interest. Much of this interest is purely professional and will appeal to lawyers, but the peculiarities of this celebrated case give the utterance a political and general significance that cannot be overlooked.

Judge Barker is a lifelong Democrat. He has held office as a Democrat for many years, was elected to the Appellate Bench as a Democrat, and the quality of his party devotion will not be questioned by anybody. Judge O'Rear, who concurs with him, is a Republican; but Judge Burnam, who is also a Republican, does not concur with him, so that the motive of the separate opinion is clearly lifted outside of political atmosphere and founded upon a pure conception of the meaning of the inalienable right of fair trial by jury, which after all is the fundamental doctrine of every political party and the original purpose of every free government.

But it is significant and interesting at this time, when Kentucky is emerging from a crisis of partisan passion the most intense and far-reaching in its history, that the judicial denunciation of the peril of that passion, when permitted to intrude upon the principles of justice, should come from a Judge whose personal partisanship and activity have never been questioned. The striking way in which he expresses the deep conviction of his mind is the concentrated echo of an unformulated feeling that exists among intelligent partisans and non-partisans all over Kentucky.

Says Judge Barker, discussing the injustice of permitting Caleb Powers to be tried by a jury of opposing political partisans:

"The administration of even-handed justice has no more insidious enemy than political prejudice; it enters unseen and unsuspected into the human mind, corrodes the reason and undermines the judgment; neither purity of heart nor exaltation of character affords an antidote for this deadly poison; indeed, these virtues may well magnify the evil, for the mind thus possessed is all the more ready to enforce the oblique judgment when it has no cause to suspect its own integrity. The pages of history are eloquent with the evils of this passion. It is recorded that the ferocious soldiery sent to hurry the inhabitants of Somersetshire after the rebellion of 1485, although disciplined in the rapine of Tugger, inspired the followers of the unhappy Monmouth with less terror than did Lord Jeffreys with his 'forms of law' and costly juries; that when the English Government established the common law in India the native who found himself entangled in its meshes, though schooled by fatalism to submit to the face of death, was frozen with terror in the presence of a mysterious system whose procedure was in an unknown tongue, and whose verdicts were rendered by unsympathetic strangers from across the sea.

"Those conversant with current history have seen a highly civilized and generous people under stress of racial passion condemn without proof a soldier charged with a political crime, and sentence him without mercy to a punishment worse than death; and yet when the storm had spent its force that judgment was annulled, the victim released, and all the world now knows his innocence."

These are not only very eloquent, but noble words. They express with strong and correct passion the recoil of the fair mind from the administration of mere forms of law in place of the life-giving substance of law itself, which stands as the bulwark of protection to the innocent, even though it sometimes protects the guilty. The reference to the Dreyfus case is strongly in point. There the same questions were raised as in the Powers case. Perjured and forged testimony and damning circumstances were produced before a tribunal of racial and political adversaries of Dreyfus to convict him. And they did convict him, although his innocence is now established.

Judge Barker holds in the light of this and the indubitable political passion that enveloped the trial and prosecution of Powers that the Powers case was one where the trial Courts should have exhausted every means to prevent political prejudice from reaching or approaching the jury; if it succeed in reaching there through the unconscious prejudice of the trial judge, then the Court of Appeals should correct the fault; if it touch even that Court, then, under the Constitution of the United States, the accused can seek his protection from local prejudice in the last Court of National resort.

This is what many thousands of persons have felt who had no opinion as to the guilt or innocence of Powers; of other thousands who thought him guilty but did not think he had had a fair trial; it is the conviction of all who believe him to be innocent.

The clarion utterance of Judge Barker giving judicial expression to this strong feeling we hope to be the voice long wished for to stronger impetus to the movement for keeping prejudice out of the Courts and making the tribunals where every citizen accused may sit himself, secure that the state will protect his rights no less jealously than it will enforce its own.

Judge Barker has written an opinion that lives in history and be quoted long after he has passed from the scenes of his labors. It does honor to him as a lawyer, as a Judge, as a patriot and as a citizen.

ONE FROM MISSOURI

County Judge Lies in Jail But Draws His Salary All Right

The returns show that even St. Clair county, the Gibraltar of Missouri Democracy, went Republican at the last election, and, more than that, it elected three Republican Judges of the County Court.

The office of Judge of the County Court of St. Clair is an unique one, for it entitles the incumbent to two years stay in jail and pay at the rate of $5 a day while in jail, so that the office is the most eagerly sought in the state.

Some twenty years ago the citizens voted to subscribe $200,000 to a railroad. The bonds were printed, but when the time came to raise the money the citizens of St. Clair objected to the tax levy. The Court refused to make it.

The railroad officials received an order on the County Judges compelling them to levy the tax to pay the money which had been voted. The Judges refused.

Then the Court issued an order of contempt of Court.

Federal Marshals were sent out after the Judges, who promptly took to the brush. The Marshals finally landed them in jail until they should purge themselves of contempt by signing the tax levy.

The law of St. Clair reads that the Judges shall be paid $5 a day only when actually serving the county. The Judges, finding that so long as they were in jail they could claim to be serving the county, spent the rest of their term in the County Jail, drawing $5 and living at the expense of the county.

When their terms expired and new Judges were elected, the Marshals of the Federal Court promptly appeared with a new writ for the new Judges.

THE LEDGER.

The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage says—
"A newspaper whose columns overflow with the advertisements of business men has more influence in attracting attention to and building up a city or town than any other agency that can be employed. People go where there is business. Capital and labor will locate where there is an enterprising community. No power on earth is so strong to build up a town as newspapers well patronized, and this power should be appreciated."
